This innovative MEd cohort will engage participants in real-world projects enmeshed in learning and scholarship. The program represents the view that at this time we need to experiment broadly and creatively in projects that can help achieve sustainability. Constant reform is critical in our major social institutions, like education, especially now as these entities attempt to collaborate with one another on new solutions for sustainability.

Students will experience an immersive and energetic environment as they work with City of Vancouver staff. In teams, they will consult on, create, and promote real world solutions within the city and its built, outdoor, and natural environments.

PROJECT TOPICS:

- Food Waste Education
- Community Building
- Accessing Vacant Land
- Rewilding
