PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The MEd in Early Childhood Education program, offered online, includes opportunities for participants to inquire into their professional practice with young children. This engaging graduate program offers opportunities to explore issues in early childhood research, theory, and practice.

The early childhood graduate program is an interdisciplinary cross-departmental program that consists of core courses in early childhood education (ECED) and related courses in other departments. This MEd program requires a minimum of 30 credits, including the seven online graduate courses (3 credits each) and 3-credit graduating project (24 credits) posted in the schedule.

To complete their programs, students choose a minimum of 6 credits of electives. These may include 3-credit graduate or undergraduate courses at the 300- and 400- level, many of which are offered online, or on-campus courses; for example the ECED 565 Summer Institutes. These electives require pre-approval from the program's advisor.
