Teaching and Learning in Complex Contexts: Imagining a Significant Future in Refugee Education

Research Symposium

This Symposium gathers researchers, students, educators, staff and community members to share current research in emergency education, imagine new possibilities for the future, and plan future concrete actions.

The agenda is organized with two main features: “presentations” (where we share our research and questions) and “working sessions” (where we discuss and determine next steps).

The overall goal aspires to establish an overview and details of our collective projects on refugee education and to map out relevant action plans.

Welcome. We greatly appreciate your attendance and contributions.
